GERO 494: How Emotion and Stress Affect Cognition Across the Lifespan
Information Session: 4pm on Wednesday, 2/13 in GER 114

May 13 – May 31, 2019

Students will learn about research and theory bearing on cognitive, personality, adaptive, and social processes throughout the adult lifespan, and about applications of current research and theory to practical matters in the field of gerontology.

“I have never taken a gerontology class and was fascinated by the different aspects of aging—physical, psychological, and emotional.”
Gillian Miller, Senior, Real Estate Development
